AI fluency is quickly becoming more than a technical skill—it's becoming a workplace skill.

But what does being AI fluent actually mean for today's professionals?

For our next WBW | Women Back to Work Power Hour, we're excited to welcome Irena Palamani Xhurxhi, Director of Applied AI at Walmart, for a practical conversation about navigating careers in an increasingly AI-powered workplace.

We'll explore how AI is changing the skills employers value, what AI fluency can look like across different roles, and how professionals can continue building and demonstrating those skills—even if they don't work in a traditional AI or technical role.

Irena will also bring the hiring-manager perspective into the conversation, including some of the AI-related questions candidates are hearing in interviews today and how to approach those conversations with confidence.

💬 And bring your questions! We'll have a live Q&A with Irena, so come ready to ask about AI skills, career relevance, hiring expectations, or what AI fluency could look like in your own field.
