Relauncher Success Stories

From Career Break to Managing Director: Karla Kaplan's relaunch at Wells Fargo

Karla Kaplan left a career she loved in 2017 after her son was born. A few years later, she was thinking about returning; "I realized how much I valued my career and the fulfillment it brought me."

Karla returned to work through Wells Fargo's Glide - Relaunch career reentry program in its inaugural cohort. Her career advanced rapidly from there. Today Karla is a Managing Director in Wells Fargo's Commercial Banking group, managing strategic mid-corporate relationships across the Northeast; "This is a relationship business. Getting to know clients personally and professionally helps us deliver solutions that support their goals."

Karla's remarkable career progression demonstrates what is possible when a high performing professional returns to work after a career break.

Carol's Corner

“Un-retiring” on the rise - Yahoo Finance

More older Americans are returning to work after retirement — driven primarily by financial concerns says Yahoo Finance's Kerry Hannon in her new article on the topic. She also covers why "power skills" like critical thinking and decision-making give experienced professionals a real edge. Carol is quoted regarding “un-retirees“ participating in employer returnship programs.
