Bank Street Graduate School of Education

Have you ever felt called to work with children, but your career or life choices took a different path? The experience you've already built may be the foundation for a meaningful career in teaching.

Career Changer Alumni Panel (Virtual)

Monday, April 20 | 7:00–8:00 PM ET

Learn more & RSVP

For more than a century, New York City's Bank Street Graduate School of Education has prepared educators, including professionals pursuing a career change, through a progressive approach grounded in reflection, mentorship, and hands-on fieldwork in real educational settings. Teaching offers the opportunity to shape the lives of children and contribute to stronger, more thoughtful communities. For many professionals, teaching becomes a way to align their work with their values and make a lasting difference in children's lives. Graduate classes are offered online and in person.

Join Bank Street alumni who successfully transitioned into teaching after careers in other fields. Panelists will share their journeys into education and offer insights for professionals considering a similar path.

Weekly Insight

"In an interview, don't apologize for your career break. Instead, acknowledge it and move on to why you are the best person for the job: 'Yes, I took a career break to care for a family member and now I can't wait to get back to work! In fact, when I worked for X corp, we faced similar customer challenges... and then give your example' This means you'll need to practice recounting anecdotes from your pre-career break role."
